KEEPING THE Connection

Artificial Intelligence (AI) is everywhere. Search engines, what to watch next on a streaming service, and the route your van recommends you take based on traffic, just to name a few. But there are so many other uses for it. AI can create a custom workout plan, write emails, take meeting notes, and help us fine-tune a budget.

Hardwood Floors magazine's 2027 National Wood Flooring Association (NWFA) Industry Outlook found AI adoption remains limited among members. Only 10 percent of survey respondents use it extensively, while 44 percent are not using it at all. For those using AI in some way, marketing and content creation lead current use at 43 percent. However, they also apply AI to design visualization, sales, market research, and data analysis.

We constantly are told that if AI isn't integrated into our daily lives, we will be left behind. I don't think it is about replacing us so much as finding ways to enhance productivity. Maybe a few hours saved by having AI reformat something into a spreadsheet for you is time that instead can be spent calling clients. It's a balance of embracing technology while maintaining the human element that makes our industry so great.

Oakly.AI is one example of how the NWFA is doing that. Oakly is an artificial intelligence assistant specifically built for the wood flooring industry. It will live on NWFA's three websites: nwfa.org, hardwoodfloorsmag.com, and woodfloors.org. You'll be able to ask Oakly about technical guidelines, training schedules, membership benefits, or industry standards, and you'll get fast, accurate answers.

Keep in mind the information comes from the NWFA's own trusted content and resources. That's where the people remain key. Oakly is more than a chatbot. It's a new way to connect with our members, providing the information and resources they need, right when they need them.

AI can't replace the craftsmanship of the wood flooring industry. Wood flooring professionals love working with their hands to create art. Some even say they were born with sawdust in their veins. A computer does not have that level of passion for what we do. The 2027 NWFA Industry Guide you are holding reflects the entire supply chain's hard work. Showing you the products they make, services offered, and certifications earned.

There is a time and a place for online learning, and NWFA was at the forefront of that with the launch of the NWFA University more than 10 years ago. However, the NWFA continues to shine by providing the human experience with our hands-on training classes, NWFA Wood Flooring Expo, and more.

Watching a video of someone creating a medallion is not the same as having an experienced NWFA Regional Instructor over your shoulder showing you tips for building sleds or how to adjust a cut to a thousandth of an inch. Further, by spending that time in the classroom with instructors and even your peers, you then have someone to call when you have questions about a project.

In addition to NWFA's incredible schools, the entire industry comes together annually at the Expo. Taking place April 27-29, 2027, in Fort Worth, Texas, the Expo will feature top-notch education sessions on both technical and business topics, the latest products and services on the trade show floor, and fun in-person networking events.

Apply AI and other technologies to help you work smarter, not harder. Let's not forget about the value of human connection, though. Join the NWFA or get more involved today. Visit nwfa.org or call 800.422.4556.

Add even more value to your career by learning about all of the benefits of being an NWFA member.

For more information, call 800.422.4556 or visit nwfa.org.

CEO'S NOTE

By Stephanie Owen
President & CEO, NWFA

What Can NWFA Do for You?

In 2026, the National Wood Flooring Association (NWFA) launched a new effort to celebrate the journeys of our members and share how the association has supported them along the way. Featured in Hardwood Floors magazine and across NWFA's social media channels, these stories highlight real members at different stages of their careers, along with their challenges, their growth, and the opportunities that have helped them move forward. By sharing their experiences and successes, we hope to inspire others while demonstrating the many ways NWFA can be a resource throughout a member's career.

For example, Chris Bailey of Bailey Hardwoods said, "Being a member of the NWFA has been great for my family and me. It has helped us grow. It has introduced me to friends and mentors, and taught me so much about being a better contractor. All the doors that have been opened in my life have been because of the NWFA."

Igor Costa of Costa Hardwood Floors stated, "To me, the NWFA is about passion, love of the craft, and partnership. It is not about competition. We're here to help each other. Being a part of the NWFA gives you more credibility, and if you're willing to learn, there are no limits to where it can take you."

So, what can the NWFA do for you?

ADVANCE YOUR CAREER

- Attend hands-on training classes to gain cutting-edge skills, master innovative techniques, and network with industry leaders to boost your reputation and profits. You'll learn from NWFA Regional Instructors and manufacturer representatives showcasing cutting-edge products and expertise.

- Set yourself apart. The NWFA's Certified Professional program validates your industry knowledge and recognizes you as an expert in your field.

BUILD RELATIONSHIPS

- The NWFA Wood Flooring Expo is an unmatched opportunity to learn from industry leaders and strengthen professional connections. There are more than 50 opportunities to network with your peers who share a passion for craftsmanship.
- Get involved. With multiple leadership opportunities, committees, and social groups to join, along with attending in-person schools, there are many ways to get involved with the NWFA.
- If you have a difficult jobsite question, you don't have to go it alone. The NWFA's technical hotline is one call away with expert advice.

STAY INFORMED

- Each year, Hardwood Floors magazine provides nearly 600 pages of custom content tailored to wood flooring professionals across the supply chain. You'll go behind the scenes of creative projects, find valuable technical advice, see new products and trends, learn business best practices, and meet interesting people in our industry.
- The NWFA's comprehensive technical publications and guidelines are the industry-accepted standard. Members have access to straightforward information that will help guide you through situations you may encounter on the job.
- Plus, NWFA partners with the Hardwood Federation to keep you aware of what's happening in Washington, D.C. that could impact your business, ensuring wood flooring has an advocate on Capitol Hill.

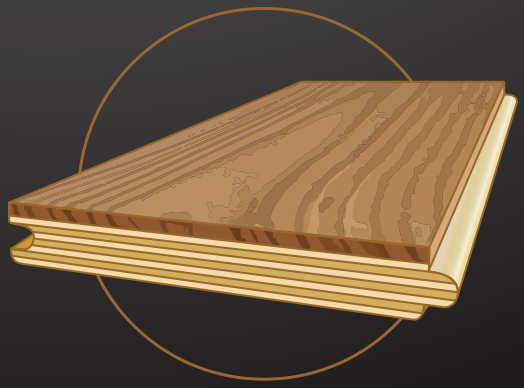

The NWFA is more than a membership. The more you engage, the more value you bring to your career, company, customers, and the wood flooring community. Explore the many benefits today by visiting nwfa.org or calling our team at 800.422.4556.

Life gets messy – and boy, are we here for it. It's loud. It's busy. It's real life.

And if you want a bit of truth in advertising, well… here it is: Will our solid hardwood floors look exactly the same after 25 years, 3 kids, a few dogs, and more than a dozen family holidays that would rival the Griswolds with Cousin Eddie in tow? Probably not.

But here's what our floors will do: They'll endure. They'll age with your home and retain their value. They'll be healthier for your family than any imitation floor ever could. And when life leaves its marks – those same floors can be repaired, resanded, and renewed multiple times. So they'll look brand new again for the next 25 years of living and beyond.

Now what other floor can give you that assurance? We can tell you it won't be the plastic one with all of the promises.

So don't settle for the imitations. Invest in the floor that outlasts the chaos, the holidays, the spills, the dogs, and yes… even Cousin Eddie.

Choose Maxwell Hardwood Flooring because real life needs real hardwood.

Herringbone or Chevron?

Both herringbone and chevron flooring patterns add a nice touch of luxury and sophistication to interiors. Herringbone flooring planks are cut at 90 degree angles to create a distinct zig-zag pattern, while most chevron floors are cut to 45 degree angles. Other custom angles are available as well.

Herringbone or Chevron?

Both herringbone and chevron flooring patterns add a nice touch of luxury and sophistication to interiors. Herringbone flooring planks are cut at 90 degree angles to create a distinct zig-zag pattern, while most chevron floors are cut to 45 degree angles. Other custom angles are available as well.
